

Peerooz Saeed studied medicine and his residency at university of Amsterdam.

He was a fellow in orbital surgery with Leo Koornneef in Amsterdam, the Netherlands and Jack Rootman in Vancouver, Canada.

Since August 2000, he has a position as consultant orbital and oculoplastic surgery at the orbital center, university of Amsterdam beside his private practice.

He has trained many orbital and oculoplastic surgeons from across Europe and North America. As the training of fellows from certain regions of the world entail some logistical and financial challenges, he has initiated fellowship programs locally in hospitals and university in South America, Southeast Asia and Eastern Europe. Since 2004, he is the president of the world Access to medical advances foundation. He is member of the orbital society and Guest professor in some European universities.